HOLLAND HIGH SCHOOL was the first school in Michigan to establish a chapter of the National Honor Society of Secondary School membership which is based on scholarship, leadership, service, and character. Its purpose is not only to honor students for worth-while achievements but also to encourage them to excel in future undertakings.

The emblem, a pin shaped like a torch, symbolizes the purity of blameless character, the illuminating light of knowledge and wisdom, the radiant glow of service, and the challenging beacon of leadership. To these ideals the members dedicate themselves.

Every year the Alumni of the Holland chapter hold a meeting where old friendships are renewed and happy memories are recalled.

MARTHA-BY-THE-DAY

THE SENIOR PLAY given by the class of 1932 under the direction of Miss Lucille Lindsley was an outstanding success.

Large crowds enthusiastically greeted the play every night, as the curtains parted to disclose a drab tenement scene, while behind stage the theme song, "East Side, West Side," was musically (?) shouted.

Margret Van Raalte, as Martha, won the hearts of the entire audience by her honesty and homely philosophy. Martha was a hard working scrub woman who went out "By-the-day" to support her family, and she always succeeded in everything she undertook. This was a very difficult role and much credit is due Margret for her splendid portrayal of the lovable Martha. No audience could have wished for a sweeter little heroine than Barbara Evans, who took the part of Claire Lang; while John Leland, as Frank Ronald, a wealthy bachelor, thrilled the feminine hearts in the audience by his ardent pursuit of Claire. Among Martha's biggest worries were Steve Lundy, a penny-grasping landlord, played by George Good, and her crabby old mother-in-law, Helena Visscher, who had a wonderful rheumatic limp and who provided the audience with plenty of laughs. Martha also had two spoiled, sassy little daughters, Francie and Cora, respectively Clara Witteveen and Vera Damstra. Sam Slawson, better known as Baxter McLean, was Martha's husband, who had lost his job and was threatened with tuberculosis. To improve Sam's health, the entire Slawson family had to leave their tenement house and go to the mountains. Mrs. Sherman, Jean Rottschaefer, was Mr. Ronald's sister and the villainess of the play. Her misdeeds were found out upon the return of her ex-convict husband, Austin Kronemeyer, who had gone to prison in his wife's place. Amy Pelham, or Harriet De Neff, was the sweet young lady who managed to mix things up for the two lovers of the play. Shaw, the English butler, was played very well by Raymond Souter; while one of the most popular of the actors was Flicker, the little dog who was always falling down wells.

Miss Lindsley has said, "I think this is the best play I have ever given, and if future classes produce a group of actors who are as anxious to co-operate and as loyal to a coach as this group has been, we need never fear for the success of future Senior Plays."

Council Plays

Boter, Japinga, Visscher, Cook, Combe, Wishmeier,
Evans, Steketee, Van Kolken, Notier, Damstra, Smith,
Te Roller, Dykema, Rottschaefer, Gross, Van Raalte, Leland.

TO AID in financing the Senior Year Book the Council decided to sponsor an evening of plays coached by Miss Steketee and Miss Smith.

In the play Two Crooks and a Lady, Jean Rottschaefer, as Mrs. Sims-Vane, proved herself the perfect lady, though a helpless, paralyzed one, in dealing with two crooks, Barbara Evans and Louis Dykema. On her thirty-fourth birthday, Mrs. Sims-Vane had received from her husband a diamond necklace with a stone for every year. She is much older than that at the rise of the curtain, but her necklace is still prized by this widow, who is now absolutely unable to move from her wheel chair. She discovers that her maid is an accomplice to Miller, the Hawk, who has come for the necklace which he believes to have thirty-three stones. Mrs. Sims-Vane cleverly outwits the crooks when she finds that neither one shows any honor, not even toward each other. Justice is meted when the two officers, Earl Cook and Fred Jappinga, are brought in by the old lady's companion, Olive Wishmeier, and the necklace remains with Mrs. Sims-Vane.

Nevertheless, an interlude acted before the curtains, was introduced by the Prologue, Betty Kremer. The device-bearer, Ivan Bouman, set the scene in which the Boy and the Girl, Victor Notier and Marian TeRoller, cause a would-be burglar, John Leland, to take the straight and narrow path by letting him act out the word "nevertheless."

In the comedy Cabbages, the audience was much amused at the trials of the Grossmeier family in their attempt to be a First Family. Margret Van Raalte, as Mrs. Grossmeier, did her best to make her husband, Stuart Gross, and her daughter, Tildy, played by Helena Visscher, live up to the social altitude to which their newly acquired money had raised them. James Boter, as the intrusive reporter, William Combe, as a Chicago geneologist, and Elizabeth, the maid, played by Gene Van Kolken, put the Grossmeier family back in its place, so that they are glad to be on a level again with their old friend, Mrs. Lena Fischer, played by Vera Damstra.

Class Prophecy

IN THE SUMMER of 1952 when I happened to be travelling through the western part of Michigan I was indeed greatly surprised to see that the two famous cities of Holland and Zeeland had joined hands, and had become a thriving metropolis on the shores of Lake Michigan. Macatawa was again the mecca for every resorter and Waukazoo was fast gaining on the famous resort. Black Lake was in the spotlight of the world.

Just the week before I arrived, Ted Essenburg and Warren Heusing had battled for the world's speedboat championship. George Good had received a contract to build a canal to Grand Rapids so that the lake boats could travel farther inland.

Since the World's Fair was to take place in Holland that year, I was engaged as special correspondent for the Chicago Tribune, and therefore came across many interesting facts concerning my former high school classmates.

Imagine my surprise when I entered the elaborate broadcasting studio, KHHS located in the Westveer Building on the corner of State and Lemmen streets, and saw Bill Masselink as the chief radio announcer! He told me to be sure to see the fierce "Wild Man of Borneo," Denton Norlin.

The stock show proved to be exceedingly interesting for it was none other than Earle Tellman, a confirmed old bachelor, displaying his prize stock. He was ably assisted by John Kaper and his six strapping young sons.

Finally, I was successful in pushing through the crowd around the Faber-Tysse hot-dog stand. How I laughed when I saw Earl with his shiny bald crown and Kenny as a champion heavyweight of three hundred fifty pounds! Evidently he was the victim of frequent "gedunking."

Of course, I had to take a ride on the Ferris Wheel operated by Garold Snyder. To my astonishment, the motor stopped and I found myself in the uppermost position of the wheel. Fortunately, I could see a great deal of the fairgrounds. The first thing to catch my eye was the race track. I had to look twice before I was sure, for there, getting ready for a race, was Herman Van Ark riding "Slow Poke." Directly below me and selling chances for a car was Lois Vander Meulen. I dropped a penny on her head. When she looked up, I waved to her. A dazzling array of colors caught my eye and there I saw Howard Hoffman eagerly selling balloons. To the right in a large open space were several airships of the latest models getting ready for a thrilling demonstration. Upon closer observation I noticed that three of the planes were to be piloted by Joe Aardema, Louis Dykema, and Muriel Chard: Her co-pilot was Lawrence Maxam. Suddenly I felt myself descending and when I reached the ground decided to see some of the main attractions at a closer range.

I hurried to the hangars in which I found the monster dirigible, "The Holland," in the shape of a wooden shoe, owned by Nathaniel Wiersema and Martin Waterway. Among the spectators I saw a familiar red head, Helena Visscher. Years hadn't changed her much. I made known my presence immediately whereupon she invited me to her beautiful home on Woodlawn Terrace the following evening.

After a busy day's correspondence I was very glad to get away from the day's toil to an evening of gayety. Upon my arrival I found that the other guests had assembled, came in unnoticed and stood on a balcony overlooking the dance floor. At one end Gene De Glopper and his famous orchestra were playing. Since nearly everybody was dancing, I had an excellent opportunity to see who was present. John Leland and Clifford Plakke, the famous explorers, were standing in one corner talking earnestly to Baxter McLean, a well-known chemist. Just then Mrs. McLean (Margret Van Raalte) joined them.

At the conclusion of the dance, a short intermission was given, and to my great delight the Brendel Sisters performed. They had made their debut a year ago in one of the large Parisian theaters.

Robert Bontekoe, who had won fame as an artist, and his wife, Frances Moomey; Verna Van Dort, the beauty expert; Gene Van Kolken, accompanist for the metropolitan singer Helen Jean Pelgrim, were among those enjoying themselves.

Ade Eberhardt, the movie queen, was surrounded on all sides by her many admirers. She flashed me a smile as she caught my eye. I had known her for a long time and at one time had been her publicity manager.

Over in the corner I spied Bernard Rowan, international quarter-miler, lounging nonchalantly against the window. Talking earnestly with him was Art Van Looyengoed, who had broken the ski jump record in the last winter olympics.

In the middle of the floor was Earl Cook, popular mayor of the city doing justice to "Tiger Rag" as played by Gene De Glopper.

Bill Combes, the famous pianist, who accompanied Howard Vanden Berg, the celebrated tenor, was talking with the hostess. I looked about for Howard and finally saw him tasting the refreshments. I was ready to go over and help him out when a voice was heard, "Something for you, sir?" I turned quickly and to my delight recognized Ray Souter, the butler. After a few minutes of interesting conversation, my search for familiar faces was continued.

The first to arrest my attention was Alyce Vander Riet, who had won prominence with the production of her latest play, "The Fool." She was busily engaged in conversation with Albert Schrotenboer, the world's champion lightweight boxer. There was rumor that the two were to be married.

What a successful party that was! It was impossible for me to fall asleep as I lay there thinking over the many good times we had together at Holland High School.

On the day of my departure, I went to the tennis tournament for the woman's single championship of the country. There Vera Damstra and Olive Wishmeier were battling for the crown. My good friend, Jean Rottschaefer, was mistress of ceremonies. I still can see Vera's smiling face as she won the championship.

Class Will

KNOW ALL MEN by these presents that we, the Class of 1932 of Holland High School, being of sound and disposing mind and memory but knowing the uncertainty of our academic career, do hereby make, publish, and declare this to be our last will and testament, hereby revoking any and every other will heretofore by us made.

To-wit: 1. We direct that all our just debts, the expenses of our last sickness, and our funeral expenses be paid.

2. We give and bequeath our seats to the Juniors, the waste paper to the janitors, the Senior Book as a model for future Boomerang Boards, our memorial to the ghosts in the lower hall, our general good behavior to classes to come, and many happy memories to Miss Lindsley and Mr. Hanson.

3. We give and bequeath Olive Wishmeier's and Jean Rottschaefer's race for valedictorianship to Angelyn Van Lente and Calvin Vander Werf, provided neither get any more A's before June, 1933; Baxter McLean's ability to keep a tune to Louis Jalving; Bill Combe's musical talent to Dick Van Raalte; Betty Drew's double chin to Helen Seif; Emmet Van Duren's moustache to Rudy Martinus; and Ted Essenberg's celerity to Bernard P. Donnelly, Jr.

4. We give and bequeath George Good's conceit to Jim Boter; Vera Damstra's shocking immodesty to Barbara Lampen; Muriel Chard to Bob Winter; Helena Visscher's gracefulness on the dance floor to Dorothy Beach; Dick Keeler's violin to Lucia Ayers, provided she does not go to jail or commit an act of crime for at least ten years; Bernice Bauhahn's seriousness to Grace Keeler; and Toodie Van Raalte's histrionic talent to Marion Te Roller.

5. We give and bequeath Barbara Evan's voice to Lucille Buter; Sewell Fairbank's blushes to La Verne Scheerhorn; Stewie Gross' glasses to Anita Hilman; Dorothy Mae Kleis' retiring ways to Emily Evans; Howard Van Den Berg's line to Bill Wichers; and Melvin Lievense's studiousness to Elton Cobb.

6. We give and bequeath Alyce Rose Van De Riet's practical inspirations to Lois Geerds, provided she never marries; Al Vander Sluis' taking ways to Bob Wishmeier; Janet Van Til's permanent to Christine Ver Hulst; Gene De Glopper's xylophone to Victor Notier, provided he practices five hours a day; and Morris Kronemeyer's curls to G. G. Visschers.

All the rest, residue and remainder of our estate, real and personal, of whatsoever nature and wherever the same may be situated, we give, devise, and bequeath to Holland High School. We hereby appoint J. J. Riemersma as the executor of this our last will and testament. In witness whereof we hereunto set our name and seal, this fourth day of April in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred thirty-two.

CLASS OF 1932, HOLLAND HIGH SCHOOL

On this 4th day of April in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred thirty-two, the Senior Class of Holland High School subscribed the above instrument and declared the same to be their last will and testament in our presence, and we thereupon not being interested in the same at the request of said Senior Class and in their presence and where they could see us sign our names and in the presence of each other did thereupon on the day and year above mentioned subscribe our names hereto as witnesses thereof.

AL CAPONE.

AMY SEMPLE MCPHERSON.

Commencement Processional

Words by Miss Hannah G. Hoekje

Look! the nation's youth is coming!
See the gallant forces grow;
Strength of mind sends Wisdom's offspring
Forth to conquer every foe.
Strong Heart! Strong Heart!
Youth, we say, 'tis good to know.

Hark the shouts of acclamation!
Brows are wreathed with laurel, yew;
Strength of muscle, bone, and sinew,
Trophies wins in triumphs new.
Brave Heart! Brave Heart!
Youth, we shout, 'tis good to do.

Comrades feel the ties of kinship,
Clasping hands in sympathy;
Strength of heart, of soul, of spirit
Arms the youth mankind to free.
Great Heart! Great Heart!
Youth, we cry, 'tis good to be.

Knowing truth creates the strong heart,
Doing deeds of courage, might;
Being great in soul and spirit
Armor gives to war for right.
True Heart! True Heart!
Follow still that gleam, that light.

Dear Leona,
Here's to a dear pal. I hope we meet out to the lake a lot this summer. Remember the surprise party on the Robinson's and also our Bunco parties. Best wishes
